UK Outlook for Tuesday 2 Nov 2021 to Thursday 11 Nov 2021:
Remaining unsettled through the week. Showers are likely across southern and central areas, with the potential for strong winds in the south and across western coastal areas. Becoming possibly brighter in the northeast. Further spells of rain persist, some of which are likely to turn to snow over mountainous areas to the north. There is a risk of this rain being impactful, however it will most likely be less so than of late. Unsettled conditions are likely to remain for much of this period, with a few short-lived settled interludes arriving later, which may result in some frost and fog by night. Due to a cooler northwesterly air flow, temperatures are most likely to be lower than average for the time of the year, particularly in the north.
